Clarification regarding the Shabbat times during the summer months

Ordinarily Shabbat begins 18 minutes before sunset.

However, as we enter the long days of summer in our community, we will be bringing Shabbat in at the earlier time of 7.40 pm.

This will allow our members to have their Friday night meal at a more convenient hour.

For the benefit of our members who are unable to light candles with the rest of the community at 7.40 pm, we have put the latest time for candle lighting in brackets.

Kabbalat Shabbat will take place at 7.15pm throughout the summer.

We wish the following members, who have Yahrzeit in the coming week, a long life: -

Karla Austin, Vivienne Berlin, Mavis Bonham, Helen Brownstone, Elaine Chaplin, Shirley Collett, Martine Conway, Leila Fields, David Flaum, Hilary Goldstein, Alan Graham, Dawn Graham, Marina Graham, Sheila Graham, Elizabeth Greene, Michael Griver, Joyce Halperin, Myrtle Holman, Sharon Joseph, Sheila Keizner, Marilyn Mandel, Harold Marco, Cyril Marks, Linda Mishkin, Diana Neslen, Stuart Pessok, Mandie Preston, Francklyn Rabin, Gerald Reisman, Harold Rosenberg, Laurence Rosenberg, Sidney Schlesinger, Rosalie Shaffron, Doris Sheril, Shirley Silver, Cynthia Simmons, Linda Stanton, Philippa Stanton, Harvey Student, Martin Taylor, Raisa Yufit and Yakov Yufit.

News and Views - What does the Torah say about rose tinted glasses?

As the year continues, the cost of petrol keeps getting more expensive, with experts saying that the cost of a full tank will be more than £100. As this fuel crisis deepens, many are looking back in nostalgia to the days when a tank cost less than half of what we are currently paying. What is the Torah's view on looking back with nostalgia to the good old days?

In this week's Torah portion, we are told about the rabble who complained about the constant diet of Mannah that they were receiving in the desert. They wanted a diet of meat instead. These people looked back on their existence as slaves in Egypt and preferred it to their current status. They complained: "We remember the fish that we ate for free in Egypt, the cucumbers, and the leeks and the melons. Now our souls are empty, it is only to the Mannah that we look." Rashi understands that their rosy memories of the past in Egypt were manufactured. If Pharaoh would not even give them the straw that they needed for bricks, why on earth would he give them food? Rather, says Rashi, they were looking for an excuse to complain about their treatment by the Almighty.

If you were to ask an Israelite in the wilderness whether he was lying, I am sure that they would deny such a claim vociferously. They must have truly believed that this was how they were fed - with fish, leeks and watermelons. Perhaps this shows the strength of having rose tinted glasses. When we are dissatisfied with our present, we are so sure that things were better that our mind creates scenarios which prove how much better things used to be, even if they never happened.

This occurrence is actually a psychological phenomenon called "rosy retrospection", a cognitive bias when looking at the way we think about our lives now, in comparison to the past. In fact, some scientists suggest that because the past is seen as being better than the present, the present and future must be much worse, leading to a mindset that while things were wonderful in the past, things are now going from bad to worse. If we look in the verse in our Torah portion this is exactly what happens. They no longer have their imagined food; now, they have the Mannah, which may have been the beginning of the end. Nachmanidies comments that this complaint wasn't even that the Mannah didn't taste as good as the food that they ate in Egypt. Instead, they were commenting that the Mannah itself was an uncertain commodity. If it came today, who is to say that it would fall the next? They felt unsure of their future survival, never certain that they would have food.

This uncertainty about their next meal equates to a high level of stress that the Israelites were experiencing. The Mannah's arrival at their doorstep was not something over which they had any agency. This could have led them to make the complaint to Moses for meat, and doubt that G-d had their best interests at heart.

Perhaps the lesson from this episode is to understand that we need to look objectively at our lives and see that while things may be more expensive, that doesn't mean that everything is beyond salvation. It requires management of our stress, and that may enable us to look more clearly in our lives.

I wish you all a good Shabbos
